1 Introduction

1.1 Objectives

- (1) The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) aims to develop a licensing system which encourages the rapid and innovative exploration and development of the remaining hydrocarbon potential of the United Kingdom Continental Shelf (UKCS), together with a quicker recycling of acreage through turnover of blocks between companies and through the licensing process.
- (2) DECC and Oil & Gas UK identify two key components to making seismic data more readily available to incumbent and potential new start/entrant exploration companies. These are:
 - The ability of the industry to have open access to licensed acreage for the purpose of recording any seismic data (speculative or proprietary) (Open Access)
 - The efficient release of Proprietary Seismic Data (hereafter referred to simply as 'Data')
- (3) Open Access is well-established in the UKCS. Ease of access to data will now play a major part in facilitating the fulfilment of these objectives.
- (4) DECC is committed to making Data widely and inexpensively available and, to that end, has developed these Guidelines jointly with Oil & Gas UK.

1.2 Scope of the Guidelines

Two broad categories of seismic data are recognised – Proprietary Seismic Data and Speculative Seismic Data. These Guidelines only refer to the release of Proprietary Seismic Data by operating companies.

Speculative Seismic Data release is covered under a separate agreement between DECC and the International Association of Geophysical Contractors (IACC).

1.3 Legal and Regulatory Context

- (1) Under the terms of the Petroleum Act 1998, and the production licences granted thereunder, licensees are obliged to hold accurate records in order to preserve all information about the geology of the licensed area (refer to Data Quality in Paragraph 2.5). The responsibility to retain Data in perpetuity resides jointly and severally with those licensees (Data Owners) who are (or were) party to the Licence under which the Data is acquired and have a joint and several obligation to retain the Data in perpetuity. Storage and maintenance of Data in an accurate and useable form is regarded as an expense that should be borne by licensees as part of their normal ongoing Licence obligations to the Secretary of State.

- (2) Licensees are required to provide the Secretary of State with Data acquired by production licence holders during the term of the Licence and the Secretary of State may publish any such Data on behalf of the Crown after a confidentiality period (refer to Item (5)) and after consideration of any representations made by the licensees (refer to Consent to Release Data in Paragraph 3.4).
- (3) In practice and in order to reduce unnecessary burden and expense to licensees, the Secretary of State has retained the right to receive all Data on demand rather than routinely collect it.
- (4) These Guidelines incorporate the consent previously given by Licensees to bring forward the date of release from 5 years to 4 years (effective 1 January 2004) for production licences granted up to, and including, the 19th Round. Data acquired under production licences granted under the 20th and subsequent rounds must be made available for release after a period of 3 years or on determination (i.e. termination) of the licence – refer to Paragraph 2.1 Item (2).
- (5) As stated on PON9 [insert a link to the revised PON9], these Guidelines set out DECC's arrangements for Licensees to release Proprietary Seismic Data directly to third parties. The release of Proprietary Seismic Data by Licensees under these Guidelines is viewed by DECC as being equivalent to (1) a request being made by DECC under the provision of the Model Clauses headed 'Reports to be treated as confidential' (at the request of a third party) and (2) the release of such data by DECC.

2 Guidelines

These Guidelines have been developed jointly by DECC and Oil & Gas UK to achieve the objectives set out above (and replace earlier versions published in 1998, 2004 and 2008).

2.1 Timing of Data Release

- (1) Proprietary Seismic Data will be released on the 4th anniversary (or 3rd anniversary for data associated with surveys acquired under 20th or later Round licences) of the end of the year in which Data acquisition was completed.
- (2) Data acquired under a 20th Round or later production licence that has been determined (i.e. terminated) prior to completion of the initial licence term should be made available for release in accordance with these Guidelines by the end of the year that the licence is determined.

2.2 Use of the DEAL Website

- (1) Data Group Operators are required (by virtue of PON 9) to post details of their released Data to DEAL (<http://www.ukdeal.co.uk>), allowing prospective licensees and industry in general to see what released Data exists and the responsible Data Group Operator together with their contact details.
- (2) Data details should be provided to DEAL at least 2 months prior to the release date. The DECC regulatory process will be used to ensure that the existence of both new and old seismic surveys are posted to the DEAL website. Information on posting Data to the DEAL website is available in PON 9 (available at https://www.og.decc.gov.uk/regulation/pops/pon_09.pdf).

2.3 Data Types to be Released

- (1) These Guidelines apply to conventional 2D and 3D seismic surveys. They also apply to baseline 4D seismic surveys (i.e. the first acquisition and processed data sets for a 4D survey).
- (2) Shallow seismic surveys acquired as part of a site investigation are not explicitly included within the scope of these Guidelines. However, Data Group Operators are nonetheless encouraged to use their reasonable endeavours to comply with requests for copies of such data.
- (3) The Data available for release includes:
 - The Final Migration Data in a digital SEG-Y format (or in a format to be mutually agreed between the Data Group Operator and the user) on a suitable medium
 - Field Data

- (4) Licensees are encouraged to release the Final Migration Data available through subsequent reprocessing.
- (5) The particular Data licensed by the Data Group Operator to the Recipient Operator is limited to that Data listed in the schedule (Attachment 1) that is appended to the Seismic Data Release Agreement.

2.4 Turnaround of Requests for Released Data

- (1) Data Group Operators should aim to deliver released Data to a Recipient Operator within 3 weeks of receiving a firm order.
- (2) There may be exceptional cases where delivery within 3 weeks is not possible. This could be due to multiple simultaneous requests for such Data or where Data has to be retrieved from deep storage, or large-volume Field Data sets, or old and seldom-used Data (where recovery work may be necessary). However, it is a condition of all Licences that Data is maintained in an accurate (useable, accessible and reproducible) form and Data Group Operators should only rarely have to exceed the 3-week turnaround stipulation.
- (3) For the sake of efficiency, any single request for the release of Data shall be for amounts greater than the following minimum quantities:
 - For 3D data, 50km² of data
 - For 2D data, 70 line km of data

In either case, the Data Group Operator may provide larger quantities of Data at no additional cost if the Data Group Operator deems it the most cost-effective means of satisfying the Data release request.

2.5 Data Quality

Companies who shoot seismic data under licence to the Secretary of State must hold that data in an accurate (useable, accessible and reproducible) form, in perpetuity or until such time as the Secretary of State may choose to relieve them of such obligations. Such relief will be granted by the Secretary of State in the following instances:

- (1) Where a Licence interest is assigned in the form approved by the Secretary of State (refer to Paragraph 3.2 Item (1)).
- (2) Where specific relief is granted by the Secretary of State.
- (3) Where the Data is transferred to the National Hydrocarbons Data Archive (NHDA) (refer to Paragraph 3.3 Item (2)).

2.6 Data is Released under Licence

- (1) The Data Group Operator requires the Recipient Operator to licence any released Data in order that title and other intellectual property rights are protected (refer also to Paragraph 2.8). The industry standard Seismic Data Release Agreement which should be used for this purpose is provided as Addendum 2 to these Guidelines.
- (2) The Seismic Data Release Agreement is executed:
between;
the Data Group Operator, on behalf of itself and where applicable also on behalf of all members of the Data Group with the Data Group Members being named in the relevant section of the Seismic Data Release Agreement;
and;
the Recipient Operator, acting on behalf of itself but where applicable also acting on behalf of other members of a Recipient Group provided that the Recipient Group Members are all named in the relevant section of the Seismic Data Release Agreement.
- (3) If the Recipient Operator wishes other members of a Recipient Group to receive copies of the licensed Data then it must include details of the Recipient Group Members in the Seismic Data Release Agreement.

2.7 Licence Fees for Released Data

- (1) Final Migration and Field Data will be licensed on a not-for-profit, 'cost-reflective' basis. It is recognised, however, that the licence fee charged for the Data may vary depending on how the Data is managed and stored by the Data Group Operators.
- (2) 'Cost-reflective' means making Data available at prices which only reflect the incremental overhead cost associated with the retrieval, copying and distribution of each specific request for Data. Where third parties are used by the Data Group Operator, 'cost-reflective' is understood to include a reasonable return on the Data release activity for the third party.
- (3) Licence fees for Value-added Data Products, ie created through subsequent reprocessing and performed at the expense of the Data Owners, may be priced at a market rate that reflects the nature of the added value. However, Data Owners are encouraged where possible to release such Value-added Data Products under the spirit of 'cost-reflective' release, particularly in cases where the reprocessing is commonly accepted throughout industry as befitting standard practices normally associated with maintaining Data in a 'state of the art' form.

- (4) In cases where the original Final Migration Data is difficult to locate or cost-inefficient to produce, then the Data Group Operator may substitute a more recent set of Data provided that it is also made available in a 'cost-reflective' manner, i.e. without any value-added premium.

2.8 Third-party Value-added Data Products

- (1) In its licensing arrangements, the Data Group Operator permits the Recipient Operator and any Recipient Group Member (i.e. Recipient Group Members) to create Value-added Data Products from released Data at the expense of the Recipient Group Members. The Recipient Group Members shall not be prevented from earning income from the subsequent licensing of its Value-added Data Products and shall be at liberty to price the products at fair market rate. Where the Recipient Group Member is an established oil and gas exploration and production company then, as per Paragraph 2.7 Item (3), such companies are encouraged, where appropriate, to release any Value-added Data Products under the spirit of 'cost-reflective' release.
- (2) A free copy of any such Recipient Group Value-added Data Products would normally represent the maximum consideration received by all Data Owners and this arrangement would normally form a condition of Field Data release by the Data Group Operator. In situations where there may be more than one set of Data Owners (e.g. Group Shoots) then the consideration would be limited to providing a copy of Value-added Data Products over acreage where Data Owners had ownership rights.
- (3) The obligation on Recipient Group Members to provide Value-added Data Products to the Data Group Operator applies only where Recipient Operators sell or license such products to others.
- (4) In its licensing arrangements with any such Recipient Operators, the Data Group Operator must ensure that the Secretary of State shall be entitled to receive a free copy of any Value-added Data Products created by Recipient Group Members for licensing or for sale if so requested.
- (5) Delivery of any such Value-added Data Products by Recipient Group Members to the Data Group Operator should be made within one week of completion of processing by such Recipient Operators. In the case of the Secretary of State, this shall be within one week of a request for a copy.
- (6) Where they have been named in the Seismic Data Release Agreement the members of the Data Group are also entitled to receive copies of Value-added Data Products from the Recipient Group Members.

3 Responsibility for Data Release Under these Guidelines

These Guidelines generally require that one of the Data Owners (normally the Data Group Operator) takes responsibility for releasing Data as described in the following paragraphs.

3.1 Routine Data Release

- (1) For Data acquired and owned by one licence-holding group, the current or most recent (in the event of an expired Licence) Data Group Operator is responsible under these Guidelines for ensuring that Data acquired under that Licence is released on time. The Data Group Operator will act on behalf of the other Data Owners associated with that Licence (the Data Group) within the terms of confidentiality laid out in their JOA and/or unit operating agreement. Such a Data Group Operator should be the party listed on DEAL as being the responsible 'Current Data Owner'.
- (2) The Data Group Operator should also ensure that it has any necessary consents from the other Data Owners in order to licence the Data and comply with the terms of its JOA and/or unit operating agreement, or other agreement governing the licensing of such Data.

3.2 Effect of Equity Transfers on Responsibility for Data Release

- (1) The transfer of licence interests to a new licensee requires the Secretary of State's consent and since 1994 this consent has been conditional on the transfer being effected by either the Master Deed or a Deed of Assignment in a form approved by the Secretary of State. Both the Master Deed and the industry standard Deed of Assignment ensure that rights and obligations with respect to Data ownership are transferred to the new Data Group Operator.

Further information can be found in Oil & Gas UK's 'Best Practices for Handling Data at the Time of Asset Transfer' at <http://www.oilandgasuk.co.uk/cmsfiles/modules/publications/pdfs/DEX10.pdf>

- (2) Where this transfer involves a change in licence operatorship then the new operator would normally become the Data Group Operator and assume responsibility for Data release. It is important that where a new operator is appointed, licensees agree who will be the Data Group Operator and notify DEAL accordingly.

3.3 Effect of Licence Determination on Release

- (1) If a Licence, under which Data has been acquired, is relinquished or otherwise determined, then the Data Group Operator extant at the time of relinquishment or determination remains responsible for the release of Data acquired.
- (2) Where Data has been transferred to the NHDA and the Secretary of State has relieved the licensees of their obligations to hold Data in perpetuity, then the responsibility to release the Data passes to the NHDA.
- (3) If a group of licensees subsequently takes out a new Licence over previously relinquished acreage and reaches an agreement to take over responsibility for Data acquired under the previous licence, with the written approval of the Secretary of State, then the new Licence operator shall become the new Data Group Operator and be responsible for release of the said legacy Data.

3.4 Objections to the Release of Data

- (1) It is the responsibility of individual Data Owners to make representations to the Secretary of State in the event they wish to withhold release of Data after the time period such data should ordinarily be released (refer to Paragraph 2.1). This representation should be made via the Data Group Operator to the Secretary of State and must be made at least 6 months prior to the official release date.
- (2) The ultimate decision over whether Data can be withheld from release resides with the Secretary of State.

3.5 Group Shoot Data

- (1) Identifying who is responsible for the release of Group Shoot Data can be complicated by some of the commercial agreements which apply to the acquisition of such data. The normal expectation is that the Data Group Operator under whose Licence the Data was originally acquired (or the Data Group Operator who managed the processing phase) is responsible for release of Data, including that in any open acreage.
- (2) If the original Data Group Operator did not have access to some of the Group Shoot Data over adjacent licensed acreage then it is the responsibility of the most recent Data Group Operator from the licensed area over which such data was shot, to release that Data.
- (3) If the primary Data Group Operator involved in acquisition is no longer active in the UKCS then the practical responsibility of release should ordinarily revert to the current largest equity holder of the group, under whose Licence the Data was acquired.

3.6 Data Release through CDA

- (1) CDA, an operating subsidiary Oil & Gas UK, has established a centralised industry facility for the storage and management of seismic data and Data Group Operators have the option of meeting their undertakings under these Guidelines directly through the service provided by CDA.
- (2) By participating in CDA, a Data Group Operator may store its releaseable Final Migration Data in the CDA Seismic DataStore and CDA may act as a contractor to the Data Group Operator as described in Clause 6 of the Seismic Data Release Agreement.
- (3) Data made available via CDA is subject to a Seismic Data Release Agreement which is executed between the Recipient Operator and the Data Group Operator except where there is power of attorney in place which permits CDA to execute the agreement on behalf of the Data Group Operator.
- (4) Parties wishing to obtain released Data from a Data Group Operator that participates in the CDA Seismic DataStore must address themselves to CDA through its portal (found at <https://www.cdadatastore.com>).

4 Managing the Guidelines

4.1 Process Monitoring and Problem Resolution

- (1) DECC and Oil & Gas UK need to understand how successful these Guidelines are at improving the availability of Proprietary Seismic Data on the UKCS. DECC is particularly keen to understand specific issues where companies feel the Guidelines are not being followed. Where issues of non-compliance are identified either through Data Group Operators seemingly not releasing in accordance with the Guidelines or by unreasonable expectation on the part of potential requestors, then DECC will endeavour to make itself available to help facilitate a satisfactory solution. If, in DECC's view, there has been clear non-compliance with the Guidelines by the Data Group Operator, DECC reserves the right to call for Data under its statutory powers and in such cases will make such Data available under licence to the aggrieved requestor.
- (2) DECC is aware of legacy broker arrangements where Data Group Operators have entered into contracts with third parties, which may contain contractual obligations making release of Data in accordance with the strict terms of these Guidelines difficult. The existence of such contracts does not override the Secretary of State's powers in relation to data release. DECC, however, does understand that considerable effort is being made to bring these legacy contracts (and all new contracts) fully into line with the spirit of these Guidelines and DECC would bear this in mind when deciding on how to recommend any use of statutory powers.
